CONVERSION, NOT JUST EXPANSION

The full realization of what the war effort will do to our manner of living has not yet dawned upon us. Memories of what happened in the last war simply do not apply to what is ahead of us. This time it is conversion, not just expansion.

In the last World War America was called to supply foodstuffs and commodities such as were already being grown or made in this country. Our job was to EXPAND what we had done in times of peace.

Virtually all the actual equipment for the Allied armies were made in England, France and Italy. We did not have to make tank, anti-aircraft guns, etc. for the fighters. We just grew more and made more of the things we were already growing and making. There was a minimum of scarcity of commodities in this country. Many plants were able to cash in on extra buying power by catering to an expanded commodity market.

Today we are CONVERTING to the production of the fighting tools of war, our plants and materials of peacetime production. So far, our stocks of commodities made before Pearl Harbor have by and large met consumer demand. For some months yet we will still be able to purchase commodities more or less as usual. But when present stock piles are exhausted; when store shelves are emptied of goods manufactured before this summer, we shall be face to face with a mighty problem of commodity scarcity. Price control and rationing, both rigidly controlled, alone will avoid panicky inflation. The shock of not being able to buy what one has the cold cash to pay for will be a new experience for most Americans. And this problem will outlast the war. It will take a long period to "reconvert."

GO SLOW ON SECOND FRONT DEMANDS

Enthusiasm will not take the place of hard experience. And hard experience in the technique of 1942 war. In ideals, in enthusiasm, in health and vigor, in education and in daring, and in willingness to die for their country, the new American divisions are easily the equal of any in the battlefields of the world. But in the hard technique of modern war, it will be many months before we can be ready to put the necessary divisions on the continent of Europe . . and keep them there.

We will have to speed up to be ready by the summer of 1943.

Had we been sending adequate supplies to General MacArthur, we might possibly undertake a diversion of sufficient magnitude in the Far East to remove the threat of a Japanese attack on Siberia, thus releasing Russian troops guarding that front for action against Hitler. But it is doubted if we are ready for even that.

We have confidence in those who are making decisions of strategy. It may be that a new front may be opened this year. If so we must be prepared to suffer the pangs of amazing losses in manpower and in material. Or, if the Russians are left to their fate, we must bow in humility to our lack of preparedness.

The one glimmer of hope during these black weeks is that slowly the sprawling giant of America is arming for the battle-years ahead.

SAYS HENRY FORD

Henry Ford recently observed his seventy-ninth birthday. The famous car manufacturer said: "Perhaps out of this war we may learn to think. If you cause people to think, ultimately they will think right . . . after they have made a lot of mistakes. That's education, and it is only through education that we can have happiness and prosperity."

PRODUCE CENTER

Some times we are frankly amazed at the quantity and variety of "country produce" brought in to Appomattox from our trade area. This form of bartering is a mainstay of local business. The merchants who make it possible for the rural citizen to swap his produce for commodities render a tremendous service. Appomattox is a splendid market for everything that grows on the farm.

WAITING, WATCHING.

Did you know, or if you know do you appreciate the fact that night after night civilian air raid wardens are scanning the skies along our coastal areas? Watching, listening, reporting the hum of every motor?

They don't get paid in dollars and cents. Many of them work during the day, catching up on sleep at odd hours. They have been at it now for tiresome months. They're on the job so that America will have the benefit of precious seconds of notice if enemy planes approach. They are unsung heroes.

Is Sugar Rationing Necessary?

(NOTICE: Read all of the following article. If you haven't time to read it ALL, please skip it!)

An address prepared by Phillip C. Friese, Food Rationing Representative for the Southeastern Office of Price Administration, Atlanta, Ga. —

There has been a great deal said and a great deal printed about sugar rationing, and a great deal of criticism, both constructive and otherwise, has been offered. My purpose is to give you the facts as they are and to attempt in so far as I am able to interpret these facts in terms of the personal problems which we all must solve in adjusting ourselves to wartime conditions. The charges brought up by well meaning critics of the sugar rationing program can be summarized about as follows:

1. There is more sugar in the world than there has ever been before. This is probably true, since the world sugar production areas have in the main, enjoyed a bumper crop in the past year and every effort is being made to stimulate sugar production.

2. Warehouses are bulging with sugar. That is a common phrase. But remember that in normal times we got our sugar as we needed it and we are not adequately prepared to store the many months supply we should have in warehouses. Along with similar problems in rubber, petroleum, tin etc. these stock piles we are trying to create, represent one of our greatest problems. Our problems are increased by our physical inability to store the vast supplies required by our great industrial machine. Our economy is based on an orderly flow of commodities and war disrupts that flow. So while our warehouses are bulging with sugar that sugar must last a long time and if we use it all now, and no miracle ends the war, there may be many months during which we shall have very little sugar, indeed. We ration sugar while we still have a stock pile for the same reason that a desert traveler conserves his water when his canteen is full, for the desert traveler knows that a little thirst today is far better than death from thirst tomorrow.

3. There are plenty of ships. Well, if we are willing to defer the great task of shipping arms to Russia, arms to Britain and arms to MacArthur, and arms to the Flying Tigers in China just to satisfy our sweet tooth, then we certainly can bring in all the sugar we want. Today, I would like to meet the man who would say to a man with a machine gun face, "I would rather have the sugar you are using for bullets for my planes." Let's not discuss the point any further. Any one who can read and who possesses the ability to read knows what this shipping question really is. Shipyards are working night and day to produce the craft that will carry this bottle neck. But until they do, it is far better that sugar pile up on the docks of Cuba than that that airplane parts pile up on the wharves of San Francisco.

4. It has been said the boats which could bring sugar are used for less important purposes. I deny that this situation exists to the extent that many people apparently believe. However one fact which escapes some careless folk is that an essential part of our war effort is in maintaining friendly relations with Republics to the South. Some of these Republics depend for their economy on products shipped largely to this country, the Central American and some of the Caribbean Republics would collapse without our banana market. Others rely up on our market for coffee. Still others require materials which only we can supply and ships that bring them these important materials must come back loaded with the products of that country. So many seemingly anomalous situations arise at times we ship materials which must be denied to our own people to our good Neighbor Republics who need these materials desperately. Sometimes we must permit our good neighbors to ship to us some products of their which we might do without. We must not be too hasty in criticising our State Department for its decisions, which are based frequently upon facts which cannot be published. In this matter we must have faith in the wisdom and integrity of our leaders who have done so much to justify that faith.

6. It is hard to understand why ships should return from Hawaii with less than capacity load of sugar but, remember again that shipping, and I mean shipping for vital materials of war is still very far from adequate for our many needs. Imagine a ship which has just unloaded planes and supplies in Hawaii and is about to return to the mainland. Every day counts . . . every minute counts in getting this ship back to the mainland to bring another load of war island outposts. The Captain walks the bridge impatiently while the ship is loaded with enough sugar to make ballast. It would take another two days to load that ship to capacity, and another two days in San Francisco to unload it. So when he has enough sugar to make his ballast, the gang plank must come up, the ship must move around to the east, and the order must be, "full steam ahead." War cannot wait and you do not want it to wait just so you can have "sugar as usual."

Any citizen to any belligerant nation who could listen in on our discussion of the tragedy of holding our consumers to 1-2 pound of sugar per week would probably shake his head in wonderment and walk sadly away. For a half pound of sugar is a pretty fine ration in other countries in peacetime and provides more than enough sugar for health and comfort even for our American standard. No family need want for health even with this sugar ration, and the many foods which can supplement it. Fresh oranges available 12 months in the year, salads from fresh fruits and vegetables, rich in their own natural sugar, honey, syrup, condensed milk, canned fruits in rich sweet syrup are all available to the ingenious housewife who will make a little effort to help solve a big problem. Bakers, confectioners, soft drink establishments, canners, and the like are asked to confine their use to an allotment, a fair percentage of their last year's requirements, and many ingenious bootlegging have found it possible to change their formulas and hold their volume.

I beg of you not to be impatient with this problem. Use your allotment of sugar wisely and well. Remember too, that every pound you can save can save a sailor's life or perhaps put a pound of ammunition into the hands of our fighting men. The OPA is trying to spread the sacrifice as fairly and equally as possible. We all must do our share and each share willingly and gladly, and so should we contribute more than we realize to the great task in which we are engaged.

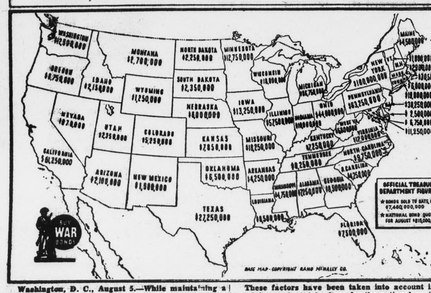
Official U. S. Treasury War Bond Quotas for August



Washington, D. C., August 5.—While maintaining a tentative annual level of twelve billion dollars as its goal, the Treasury Department today fixed the August quota for the sale of War Bonds at $315,000,000 as shown by the accompanying map by states.

In lowering the quota from a billion dollars in July to $315,000,000 in August, the Treasury has given recognition to certain factors which may be expected to result in variations in sales over the 12-month period, such as the seasonal character of farm income.

These factors have been taken into account in determining each state's share for the national quota for August and will be given consideration in fixing quotas for subsequent months.

In addition to the state quotas as set out in the map there is a federal payroll allotment quota of $9,750,000 and territorial quotas as follows: Alaska, $700,000; Canal Zone, $213,000; Hawaii, $4,900,000; Puerto Rico, $640,000 and the Virgin Islands, $37,000.

ISAAC PRECICES PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 26:12-33.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the peace makers: for they shall be called the children of God.—Matthew 5:9.

To talk peace in a warring world seems almost futile, and so it is, unless it be the peace of God. In a world largely dominated by the philosophy that might makes right, and in which men demand what they call their rights, taking them even by lawless and violent methods, it is increasingly difficult to proclaim the truth that patience and meekness are not weakness, but are Christian virtues worth emulating. The story of Isaac is interesting from beginning to end. He was an ordinary man, one of the common people. He had come through varied experiences of victory and defeat, and in the time of our lesson, Fearing a famine, and apparently not trusting God at the moment, he had gone down into the promised land to the country of the Philistines, there redigging the wells which his father Abraham had dug. The result was that he prospered. Ere long the envy, error, and the part of his enemies taught Isaac the use of ears.

—M. J. H. Turnes and Sons.

I. Peace in This World Is Temporary (vv. 18-21).

Isaac had prospered, but he was still out of the promised land, and while he was in the land of Philistines he could expect no permanent peace.

We are in the world. We long for peace, and would throw all our influence and power in the cause of bringing a righteous peace to the troubled peoples of the world. But let us not be misled by that desire into the support of unscriptural and impossible peace programs. This world is a sinful world, and as long as that is true, there will be strife and war, that men (as James puts it) may have the gains thereof for their own pleasure.

Our business in such a world is to preach the gospel of grace, winning men to Christ, that they may become men of good-will. Isaac was such a man, willing to yield even what seemed to be his right, rather than cause contention.

Undoubtedly there are times when we must defend his name and his possessions, but all too often those who do "stand for their rights" have wrecked homes, churches, and nations, and have gained nothing but an empty victory.

The peace of this world is temporary. Is there then no real abiding peace and joy?

II. Abiding Joy Is Found in Fellowship With God (vv. 22-25).

When Isaac came up into Canaan, the land which God had promised to him, he found real peace and an abiding joy in renewed fellowship with God. Even so, the Christian man and woman who will step out of a spiritually destructive fellowship with the ungodly world and come over wholeheartedly into the spiritual Canaan of full consecration and separation to God will find true peace and satisfying communion with God.

Our thought, however, has wider application—one much needed today, when so much sugar is being sold in the world will have true and abiding peace which shall cover the earth like the waters cover the sea. When the One who has the right to reign, the Lord Jesus Christ, returns to take His throne, then, and not before, will there be true peace.

We await that day with longing which grows more intense as men grow more violent in their hatred. But is there nothing more we can do? Yes, we learn from Isaac's experience that—

III. A Godly Life Is a Testimony to Warring Men (vv. 26-31).

These men were wicked men, even speaking falsehood in their claim of friendship toward Isaac (v. 29). Now that they perceived that God was continually blessing Isaac in spite of their repeated injustice toward him, they decided that it would be well to make a covenant of friendship with him. Even those who follow the way of war and aggression cannot deny the effectiveness of true Christian testimony.

Observe also that by his patience and kindness Isaac ultimately made friends out of his enemies. "It is better to turn enemies into friends than to beat them, and have them enemies still." And so this man with the patient, self-sacrificing spirit brought peace not only to himself, but to those about him, because he believed and trusted God. "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him" (Prov. 16:7).

What can we do to bring peace today? We can pray that God will help America and her allied nations to turn to Him in repentance of sin, and in a desire to so honor His name that He may be able to give His blessing. When Hezekiah spread before the Lord the threat of his enemy, God undertook for him in a mighty way, because his heart was right toward God (Isa. 37:14-20).

Will he do less for us?
